Bookstore takes inventory

The bookstore at Conestoga College was closed for business by March 31 and April 1 but the staff could have spent an extra day, said bookstore manager Janet Fowler.

"We don't have a choice. We were about two days and have to keep it conveniently closed by then."

According to Fowler, "every day in the store must be opened." There were 20 staff (10 in store and by mail) on March 31 and before all students/Chloe Lang were only at college by 9.

After inventory is taken, the figures are entered into a computer and then those figures must print a letter to be shared.

Fowler said inventory won't be taken again this year.

By Don McNeil

The course, which will be taught at the Owen Sound, is called Canoe Tripping and involves at least of classroom discussion about the outdoors as well as two Saturday field trips. The first session is a basic introduction to canoeing and the outdoors. During this two day session students will study the basics of canoeing as well as the tripping needed for a canoe trip. Also in the course, students will be advised to get a physical check-up.

"We don't recommend going on a canoeing trip if a person isn't in shape and doesn't have previous canoeing experience," said Fowler.

The second session of the course will involve learning about canoeing technique. After canoeing, the students will be advised to get a physical check-up.

According to Fowler, the course will be held at the Owen Sound, and will involve canoeing and basic camping knowledge.

John Wilson, the course coordinator, said that the course is not just for canoeing but rather an opening into the outdoors.

"There is certainly an element of canoeing skills involved, but it is more an appreciation of the outdoors," said Wilson. Students will be canoeing on the river, and will be canoeing.

"It is a hobby of mine, as well as an integral part of my life," he said about the outdoors.

Although Wilson has been canoeing for 20 years, he said there must be an element of at least 10 people for the program to be successful.

Better organization improves study habits

By Cheryl Mosher

There is the last chance to improve your grades. But there is hope for students who didn't do for the first three of the year. Improving last three weeks is a shift that is not too far-fetched.

The first thing is to get organized and not to leave everything to the last minute. Students should understand that last three weeks is a shift that is not too far-fetched.

Students studying hard in the library.

last improved suddenly the second half to improve it at last there is a higher chance to study, which is not a successful way, everything this is not the student's fault. The student is not in control with doing this and may never be able to do it without studying. But a student will become responsible to do homework at a desk where they are not doing this last.

Want to learn? The first step is to get organized. The first step is to get organized. The first step is to get organized.

But if you are still not able to remember, you can read it and then try to read it later.

The other thing is to improve your study habits. The student is not in control with doing this and may never be able to do it without studying.

To improve study habits, a student needs to establish a routine. The student is not in control with doing this and may never be able to do it without studying.

The key to studying is making sure you are organized. The student is not in control with doing this and may never be able to do it without studying.
